A NOTE FROM THE PASTOR

DISCERNMENT IS AT THE HEART OF OUR PARISH FAMILY PLAN

A commitment to both our parish campuses

One of the greatest anxieties people share regardPreparing our parish family to discern for our Parish Family Plan

Last week, team members from our parish family staff attended a special Discernment Retreat. Part of the Partners in the Gospel process, the retreat trained our team in supporting a discernment-based decision-making process.

Listening to the Holy Spirit

When we make decisions as part of this Partners in the Gospel process, the Holy Spirit must guide our decision making. The retreat provided principles of discernment that help us to set aside agendas and really listen to one another and the Holy Spirit. To do this each of us need:

- Self-Awareness. Knowing our thoughts, feelings, attachments, fears, and hopes.
- Knowledge. Gather relevant information.
- Inner Freedom. Freedom of spirit is the touchstone of any discernment process.
- Patience. Most discernment unfolds over time. It's not an event.

Sometimes we will need to use a special process

Some very challenging decisions can benefit from a very intentional process. This kind of discernment process demands a great investment of time and energy. This process creates an environment to let every voice be heard without interruption by back-and-forth conversation. It takes more time but can create greater openness to different ideas.

All of our meetings should ask what does Jesus want us to do

During the retreat, Bishop Schuster reminded us that Jesus should be at the center of all our decisions. Paying attention to our thoughts, feelings and desires can be helpful in assessing what's happening in our experience. But, when it comes time to make a decision, we must be prepared to set those things aside to respond to the call of Jesus.

One way to do this is for our gatherings to begin with prayer. This prayer shouldn't just be a box we check so we can get on to the business. It should be an essential part of the meeting that guides everything we do.

When Archbishop Etienne initiated the parish planning process, he reminded us that, ultimately it was all about preparing our Archdiocese to answer Jesus call to: "Go, therefore,*and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you.*And behold, I am with you always, until the end of the age." As we move forward in discernment, let's remember of where and who we are being called to by Jesus.

Please have one person from your household fill out this survey for your entire family — submissions are not needed from each family member. Submissions can be anonymous unless you would like to register for our mailing list in the final question of this survey. This survey will be returned to mmanning@stleoparish.org

This survey will be open October 1, 2025- October 31, 2025.

WSCC NEWS

Catholic doctrine recognizes our Baptismal call to participate in our communities to promote the common good. Elections are perhaps the easiest way for us to do so, though the ballot issues may be complicated and require more research by voters. A deliberative process of conscience formation is as necessary for municipal elections as it is for presidential elections. PROTECT YOUR POWERS IN THE AGE OF AI

AN ARTICLE FROM DEACON ERIC PAIGE

Between riding my bike to my friends' houses and my summer job, I built a mental map of Bellevue in my youth. Same thing for places I visited, until around 2010 when I got an iPhone. As soon as I started taking directions from Google Maps, I stopped constructing mental maps of where I was going.

There's a cost to the convenience of Google Maps. It's a trade I am willing to make, but there is a trade-off nonetheless.

Artificial intelligence (AI) offers similar trade-offs. We're still learning what this technology will offer. But we know we need to be cautious about it weakening the powers of our soul.

God gave us powers of the soul — among them, intellect, will and memory. We're meant to develop these powers. The Holy Spirit helps with faith to strengthen our intellect, conscience to strengthen our will and the sacraments to sanctify our memory.

But our actions matter too. When we learn about and interact with the created world, we learn about God. Researching, writing and making sense of things all exercise the powers of the soul. If we let AI do all that for us, we miss opportunities to develop those powers.

If we're thoughtful, we have a better chance of preserving those opportunities when using this new tool.

- Don't let it use you. The famous Silicon Valley adage "If you're not paying for the product, you are the product" still applies. The companies that make AI have many motivations, not all of them altruistic. We need to be active and critical users, always checking sources and treating what AI offers as an opinion rather than fact.
- Embrace the blank page. One of the most creative parts of the writing process is thinking through the outline of what you will write. Sometimes writers have a tough time with this initial process, as if the blank page intimidates them. But working through this stage develops our intellect as our imagination pulls together the things we know, developing a mental map of the subject. Resist the temptation to short circuit this process by asking AI to generate a first draft. Try to let the first draft be your own.
- Talk to a person. Going online provides quick answers when troubleshooting a home improvement project, but I get more out of calling my friend Mike for advice. We need to be careful that our use of AI doesn't displace the opportunities for building relationships that come from going to a friend for help with a problem.

Psalm 135 warns: "The idols of the nations ... the work of human hands... have mouths but do not speak ... have ears but do not hear. ... Their makers will come to be like them, and anyone who trusts in them." If we use this new tool, let's remember this warning and remain judicious, lest we become the ones being used.
